

A HARD SCHOOL

By MARY LOUISE BUZZELL

Jerry, mending his lobster pots on the beach, scowled as he saw Ellen and "that fellow" Templeton hurrying down to the inlet where the young man's boat lay; for Templeton, while ostensibly taking a much-needed rest, was paying assiduous court to the girl whom Jerry had looked upon as his future wife ever since they had played together as children.

Jerry turned his back on the approaching couple, but when they had passed he gave his rival a surreptitious glance—noting the white silk shirt, the immaculate white trousers and the wrist watch. Turning suddenly, Ellen caught his criticizing eye, laughed, and called back:

"Better forget your lobster pots today, Jerry, and bring Sarah over to the island and picnic with us!" to which her escort added a languid, "Yes, dear boy, get your Sarah and come!"

"Thanks!" snapped Jerry. "I have no Sarah—and I've something to do besides picnicking and—reading poetry!" seeing the book Templeton carried.

Receiving no answer save a tolerant shrug from his rival, he sullenly resumed his work, but a moment later, after a troubled look at the sky, he strode after the picnickers, and as Templeton pushed off the wharf, he gave him a brusque:

"Better keep an eye on the nor'wester, Templeton, those clouds mean wind; and I'd come in with the tide, it's tough rowing against it."

Templeton raised his brows, then vouchsafed a supercilious: "Ah! Thanks awfully, my good man, but have no fears, I've handled a boat several times before today!" with an emphasis on the "several" that made Jerry long to pitch him into the water; but instead, with a smothered "Humph!" he swung up the beach to the cottage he shared with his crippled grandfather. The old man seeing Jerry he stopped smoking to mutter fretfully:

"If that chap had a sense of a sculpin, he'd keep off the water with such clouds abroad!" waving his pipe skyward; then added with a gentle chuckle: "I shouldn't wonder if he found it true that experience is a hard school, but fools will learn from no other," before he gets home!"

"Very likely, but if anything happens to Ellen through his ignorance, I'll—"

"You ain't to let that whippersnapper grab your girl away right from under your nose?" queried the old man, trisulcally.

"Why, no!" blazed Jerry, "but he flatters her till she—"

"Doesn't know any more'n she ought—" interrupted his grandfather, "All the same, I'd kinder row out toward the island—you see what's coming?" Jerry nodded and sat down.

The weather grew more threatening every minute; but he waited till the tide turned, sending choppy waves in shore. Then, unable to bear the suspense, he ran down to his dory, thrust the oars into the oarlocks and pushed off into the foaming waters.

Something smashed into the dory, scraped by and was gone. Twisting around, he strained his eyes to make out the towing thing astern—it was Templeton's empty boat being driven shoreward!

His breath came in horrified gasps as he sensed the awful significance of the sight; then wild rebellion fired his soul as he thought of Ellen being dashed and buffeted into nothingness by the cruel waters. It must not—should not be! He sent a stentorian shout toward the island; it came back in a mocking echo.

Again and again he called her name, with a wild hope that somehow, in some miraculous manner, she had escaped death. Suddenly the island loomed before him—a black blot against the sky. With a mighty effort, he sent his spent voice shoreward and listened. His heart almost stopped beating for very joy, for across the lashing waters a faint ball came to him out of the darkness. It was Ellen's voice!

With a superhuman effort, his strained and swollen muscles heaved the dory; two solid figures were lifted over its high side to safety, and in silence, save for murmured "Thank Heaven!"—Jerry backed away, turned his boat toward home, and the racing tide did the rest.

Giving no heed to the babbled explanations of the modified Templeton, he lifted the shivering girl out and carried her up the beach to her home, but before reaching her door he asked:

"By what fool stunt did Templeton lose his boat?"

"He tied it to a rock with a silly little rope, which snapped in two in no time after it came on to blow, though even then he might have got it if he hadn't been afraid of getting wet!" answered the girl, angrily.

"But the salt water would have ruined his wrist watch," said Jerry, dryly, which remark brought an hysterical giggle from the girl in his arms. But the next moment she pulled his head down, and with her arms tight around his neck, whispered:

"Jerry, I simply detest a wrist watch on a man; and I just adore the smell of lobsters. Come over tomorrow, dear!"

And with a hug that left her breathless, Jerry whispered a jubilant: "You bet, honey!"

TYPICAL COAT STYLE

Out of Russia came the inspiration for this spirited coat, typical of the spring modes. It is made of a novelty mixture and its trimming is something quite new. Note that its lines are straight, its sleeves roomy and loose, its patch pockets large, its belt wide, with an original fastening, and be assured that it embodies the high points in the new styles.

Origin of Stilton Cheese.

Stilton cheese was first made in the eighteenth century by a woman called Pawley, who lived at Stilton, on the road from London to York. She said the cheese to a local inn-keeper, and his lunch guests spread its merits.

Meiba Couldn't Do It.

The latest Meiba yarn has it that the song-bird turned up unexpectedly at a charity glee-club, and the hon. organizer in doing the amiable nearly fell over herself. "Everyone wants to hear you sing badly," she bubbled. "Then they won't," said the dame, "because I can't."
